REGIONAL TRAINING CENTER

The California Regional Training Center

This is a call for support – be part of the effort to develop national and international wrestling competitors in the California Bay Area

The California Regional Training Center (CRTC) is a world-class training environment for Olympic hopefuls. We hope you will be part of what makes wrestling thrive in this region.

As a recognized U.S. Olympic Regional Training Center Site located at Stanford University, the CRTC will house and train Olympic hopefuls as they compete domestically and internationally to become World and Olympic Team members. The CRTC will also provide training and competition opportunities to qualified high school wrestlers who meet the RTC criteria so they can experience first-hand how athletes train at the next level. Finally, together with the Cardinal Wrestling Club (CWC), the CRTC will offer sessions for scholastic-level wrestlers that will range from a youth program for beginning wrestlers to intense training sessions for experienced middle school and high school wrestlers.

CRTC athletes will have an outstanding training environment through use of Stanford University's world-class facilities and instruction from a world-class coaching staff. However, we need the generosity and support of the wrestling community to ensure that CRTC athletes have their needs taken care of outside of Stanford's wrestling room. One hundred percent of your contribution will support CRTC athletes by covering expenses such as transportation, food, lodging, stipends for athlete living expenses, tournament entry fees, and offsetting fees for overseas travel and competition. Because the CTRC is a non-profit 501(c)(3) organization, your donation is tax deductible. Shortly after your donation, you will receive information by email with forms and information for tax purposes.

Support the Olympic Wrestling Movement taking place at the California Regional Training Center and be part of the effort to bring our athletes to the world stage.
